I am currently working for Hewlett-Packard, as the Sr. Software Architect. I earned my M.S. in Computer Science from California State University at Sacramento in 1993 and have worked as a software engineering, architect and manager of engineering teams since then.

During 1980s, I studied Chinese Literature and Cultural Anthropology and published a book and over ten research papers. I received my B.A. in Chinese Literature from Fudan University in 1982 and M.A. in Cultural Anthropology from East China Normal University in 1987.

I am married to Cindy with two children, Rikki and James. I love sports and enjoys playing basketball and table tennis.
